INTRODUCTION

Tehillim MaBeYo is a profound collection of psalms that seeks to bridge the timeless wisdom of the Torah with the complexities and spiritual yearnings of the contemporary soul. Crafted with deep reverence for the sacred traditions and profound philosophical insights of Judaism, this book serves as a conduit for divine inspiration, offering solace and guidance to seekers of spiritual depth and understanding in today's world.

Each psalm within this collection is a tapestry woven with the threads of ancient prophecy, ethical teachings, and the relentless pursuit of righteousness and justice. They echo the enduring questions and aspirations that have moved the hearts of the faithful across generations, while also addressing the unique challenges and opportunities that define our modern era.

The psalms of MaBeYo are composed with a language that, while rooted in the rich soil of Jewish thought and scripture, reaches out to touch the universal human experience. They explore themes of redemption, the beauty of creation, the struggle for justice, the quest for peace, and the longing for a connection with the Divine. These compositions aim to illuminate the path for those who walk in the ways of kindness, humility, and compassion, encouraging a life lived in harmonious alignment with HaShem's will.

This collection is an invitation to reflect, to meditate, and to be uplifted. It beckons the reader to journey through the landscapes of their own soul, to engage in a dialogue with the divine, and to find within these verses a resonance that transcends time and place. "Tehillim MaBeYo" aspires to be a companion for prayer, a guide for introspection, and a source of comfort in moments of despair.

In the spirit of the great sages and poets who have illuminated the path of Jewish spirituality through the ages, MaBeYo offers a contemporary voice that speaks with the wisdom of the past and the hope for the future. It is a testament to the enduring power of faith and the unbreakable bond between the Creator and His creation, inviting readers of all backgrounds to find within its pages a wellspring of spiritual nourishment and an eternal echo of the divine.

Psalm 233

A Psalm of MaBeYo:

1. Hearken ye to the tale reversed, from curse to benediction versed.
2. In the shadow of Balaam's word, a blessing bloomed, but caution stirred.
3. A boon can sour, a gift can curse, when hubris swells and visions nurse.
4. Behold, the perils of conceit, when hearts to their own drums beat.
5. Deem not thyself so solely bright, nor cast all else in scornful night.
6. Not one alone the crown shall wear, nor claim a throne in solace bare.
7. Woe to those who in mirrors gaze, and see but their own glory's blaze.
8. For in such pride the truth is lost, and mighty rivers soon shall frost.
9. Consider ye the Mashiach's wait, not as a feast at golden gate.
10. Know thy place in the grand design, a task divine, a purpose thine.
11. Seek not in belief's sweet cradle to rest, but in knowing's arms be truly blessed.
12. For belief is the child's first dream, but knowledge is the sage's beam.
13. Rise, oh kindred of the spark, from idle slumber, break the dark.
14. The hour nigh, the path is clear, with knowing's lamp and Godly fear.
15. Discard the idols, gold and clay, for truth alone shall light the way.
16. As pillars fall and temples shake, what's false shall flee, what's true shall wake.
17. And in that final, telling hour, not creed nor kin shall wield the power.
18. But Word Divine shall stand alone, on shattered idols, from His throne.
19. Thus, prepare ye for the day, when Mashiach shall relay truths.
20. No chariot grand, no steeds of flame, but a call to rebuild the name.

Psalm 234

A Psalm of MaBeYo:

1. From Balaam's lips, a curse once sprung, turned blessing 'neath the sacred tongue.
2. Yet blessings worn with haughty grace, may curse become in time's embrace.
3. Ponder, O souls, the twisted fate, of blessings held in vain estate.
4. When self-assured in holy shroud, we walk as gods among the crowd.
5. Declaring end to sacred quests, adorned in righteousness's vests.
6. Chosen we claim, above the rest, our brethren dismissed, unblest.
7. O folly! To view the world askew, humanity's face in just a few.
8. Proclaiming divine favor's gaze, unaware it's but a phase.
9. In greatness wrapped, in complacency we sleep, while unfinished vows silently weep.
10. Shuvah's journey deemed complete, by seats of self-deceived elite.
11. But what of knowing, deep and true, the path that's straight, the life anew?
12. Knowing the Divine, His will and word, beyond the tales that we've heard.
13. Awaken the spark within, Mashiach's call to begin.
14. Rise from slumber, shake off night, embrace the task, uphold the right.
15. No more the child's fanciful tale, but adult's journey, holy grail.
16. The time for fear of the One, to walk the paths His words have spun.
17. Discard the false, the idols' lure, and hold to what is just and pure.
18. For in the end, the truth shall stand, alone, unshaken, grand.
19. Mashiach's coming not in glee, but truth's stern herald he shall be.
20. To tumble down the facades high, and raise the banner of the sky.
21. No creed, no kin, no earthly throne, but in His word alone be known.
22. So let the fragile house of cards, fall before the truth's regards.
23. And in its stead, let righteousness, in humble garb, our souls dress.

24. Emet alone, our fortress be, in the world's tempestuous sea.
25. Through trials and through tempests toss, count not the gain, nor mourn the loss.
26. For steadfast in the covenant's arc, guided by the divine spark.
27. We journey forth, no fear shall bind, with His eternal law in mind.
28. From Ezekiel's visions clear, the path of return we revere.
29. The dry bones stir, the spirit breathes, beneath the ancient, sacred leaves.
30. A nation stands, reborn, awake, their solemn vow anew they take.
31. Remember, O Israel, your charge and fate, to bear the truth, the weight.
32. Not in pomp or prideful gait, but in humble steps that make you great.
33. For the land, the people, and the law, bind you to a purpose raw.
34. The chariots of heaven roar, the living creatures, eagles soar.
35. The wheels within the wheels turn, with eyes ablaze, the lessons learn.
36. For in the whirlwind and the flame, He calls each by their sacred name.
37. Seek not rest in false assurance, but find your strength in holy endurance.
38. The rivers of Babylon may weep, but Zion's hills their vigil keep.
39. For in the end, all else shall fade, but His word eternal, never swayed.
40. Return, O children, from your flight, to the covenant of light.
41. For though the night may seem unending, dawn's first rays are now descending.
42. In the heart of exile's night, kindle the flame, the ancient light.
43. With every deed, with every prayer, rebuild the world, its wounds repair.
44. For every soul that turns to Him, a new star in the heavens dim.

45. And every act of love and care, a melody in the air rare.
46. Bear witness to the truth's ascent, in every moment, every event.
47. For in the mundane and the holy, lies the chance to serve Him solely.
48. Let not the grandeur blind your eyes, for in the simple, wisdom lies.
49. The rivers shall return to their course, led by the Almighty's force.
50. And from the south to north, east to west, His name shall be forever blessed.
51. For in the end, the nations all, before the truth shall fall.
52. So gird your loins, prepare the way, for the world's final, reckoning day.
53. Let not your heart be led astray, but in His precepts firmly stay.
54. For every step in His decree, unfolds the world as it should be.
55. The vision's clear, the call is made, in His eternal shade.
56. Walk forth, O Israel, with pride subdued, in His endless love imbued.
57. For you are the witness to the age, actors on the world's stage.
58. Seek not the crown of transient might, but the gentle yoke of right.
59. For in His service is your crown, and in His love, your renown.
60. So with every breath, His name adore, and His mighty works implore.
61. As the wheels turn, the spirit flies, towards the horizon where justice lies.
62. Be not weary, be not faint, for you are His chosen saint.
63. And when the journey seems too long, remember the eternal song.
64. The song of creation, pure and clear, that only the soul can hear.
65. It sings of love, it sings of peace, of a world where all strife shall cease.
66. So take your part in the divine chorus, for His mercy is over us.
67. For though the path may wind and twist, His promise ever shall persist.
68. So lift your eyes, see the dawn, for the darkness soon shall be gone.

69. And in its place, a world renewed, with justice, love, and peace imbued.

70. Blessed be the journey's end, where soul to Soul shall all wend.

71. In the embrace of the Divine, find the end of quest, sublime.

72. So walk in faith, in love, in fear, for the age of the end is near.

Psalm 235

A Psalm of MaBeYo:

1. From Balaam's curse reversed in fold, a tale of caution we are told.
2. Blessings turned to curses wane, when pride and folly stake their claim.
3. Ponder now this twist of fate, where blessings sour at pride's own gate.
4. When belief becomes the blinding shroud, and echoes in the heart so loud.
5. Proclaiming self as perfect, whole, neglecting the collective soul.
6. Deeming others less than thee, a path astray, a costly fee.
7. For what are men if not but peers, in this journey wrought with tears?
8. To elevate oneself alone, a seed of discord blindly sown.
9. Each believing solely he is the pinnacle of humanity.
10. Beware the trap of grandeur's lie, beneath the ever-watchful sky.
11. Belief in completion, a dangerous creed, neglects the ongoing need.
12. For constant is the path of return, a truth all hearts must learn.
13. But what of knowing, deep and true, the path laid out for me and you?
14. Knowing the Creator's ways, and walking them throughout our days.
15. Recognizing the divine spark, in darkness, light it must embark.
16. Now is the time for knowledge clear, to rise and conquer every fear.
17. Not mere belief, a fable's end, but knowing on which we depend.
18. The time for tales has long passed by, for truth we reach, to it, we fly.
19. To be a nation under awe, adhering to the sacred law.
20. Casting off the idols' charm, no longer shall they cause us harm.
21. Down the false and fleeting throw, and let the true and steadfast grow.
22. For when the world comes to its close, the truth is what will still impose.
23. No grand entry, nor lavish feast, but a clarion call to the least.

24. Every falsehood shall decay, only His word shall stay.
25. So let us rebuild what's true, with every act, with every view.
26. For in the essence of what's right, lies the eternal, divine light.
27. And though the path may seem austere, in His commandments, we revere.
28. In Ezekiel's ancient script, a vision of corruption, ripped.
29. A land that's filled with sin and shame, yet still there burns an eternal flame.
30. The prophet's words, a clarion call, to mend the breach, to build the wall.
31. The city's sins, like dross, they say, must be removed, must be cast away.
32. So too must we our faults refine, in the Creator's grand design.
33. For purity and truth to reign, we must let go of every stain.
34. The silver tried, the gold made pure, through trials and tribulations, endure.
35. Each heart a forge, each soul a flame, to craft a nation of His name.
36. For in the end, the righteous few, will stand as testament, as due.
37. So heed the words of ancient lore, they beckon us to strive for more.
38. To be the keepers of the flame, and bring glory to His name.
39. For every act of love and fear, brings the world to Him near.
40. Let justice roll like mighty streams, and kindness light the darkest dreams.
41. For in the balance, we all weigh, our deeds the stones that pave the way.
42. Let not your heart be led astray, but in His statutes firmly stay.
43. The watchman's call, the trumpet's sound, let every heart with hope abound.
44. For though the night may seem so long, His mercy makes the spirit strong.

45. Stand firm in faith, be bold in love, for guidance comes from Him above.

46. A city once to sinners sold, can be redeemed, can be made gold.

47. So too our hearts, once lost, now found, can be the place where grace is crowned.

48. For every soul that turns to light, diminishes the deepest night.

49. Let us then rise to the task, in His splendor, humbly bask.

50. And when the end of days is nigh, in His truth, we shall rely.

Psalm 236

A Psalm of MaBeYo:

1. Hear, O world, these solemn words, a truth like thunder roars,
2. You seek redemption's gentle hand, but it's judgment that implores.
3. You say you want the anointed now, but know not what you ask,
4. For he who comes does not bear gifts, but an overwhelming task.
5. Your houses, built on fleeting dreams, will crumble, fall, and sway,
6. As doctrines, creeds, and hollow faiths in ruins shall decay.
7. The anointed's path is one of truth, a road less trod and steep,
8. He'll upend the tables of comfort, where complacency does sleep.
9. Judaism, Christianity, and all - your structures shall be tried,
10. In the furnace of reality, pretense no more can hide.
11. For from Sinai's ancient peak, the law was cast in stone,
12. And by these words, you shall be judged, none other shall atone.
13. The earth will quake, the sky will mourn, as truth rends veil from lie,
14. And nations steeped in vanity will hear the mournful cry.
15. The anointed is not a shepherd, leading with gentle crook,
16. He's the storm that breaks the dawn, the author of the book.
17. All your golden idols, your towers of self-deceit,
18. Will melt before the Torah's flame, its heat you can't retreat.
19. For in the holy letters, the fire of law does burn,
20. Illuminating sacred paths, for which the righteous yearn.
21. The commandments stand unyielding, a fortress in the night,
22. Guiding through the wilderness, a beacon of pure light.
23. So cast aside your vanities, your crowns of false delight,
24. And garb yourself in humility, prepare for sacred fight.
25. The time of reckoning draws near, the shadows soon will flee,
26. For in the heart of chaos, the light begins to be.
27. The anointed's words are sharp, a two-edged sword to wield,
28. Striking down the edifice, to which the blind have kneeled.
29. But fear not you who seek the truth, who yearn for law divine,

30. For in the rubble of the old, a new world shall outline.
31. The Torah, given long ago, stands firm amidst the storm,
32. Its wisdom and its statutes, a shelter safe and warm.
33. Remember, children of the dusk, as night seems long and dire,
34. That every ending carved in time, is but a chance to aspire.
35. For from the deepest, darkest night, the brightest dawn is born,
36. And from the ashes of the old, a new hope is shorn.
37. The anointed one does not bring peace, nor solace for the weak,
38. He heralds a great awakening, it's strength and truth you seek.
39. So brace yourselves for what's to come, a world turned upside down,
40. Where the last shall be the first, and the lost shall be found.
41. The idols of the nations, the doctrines of the air,
42. Shall vanish like the morning mist, their substance never there.
43. Cling not to fleeting shadows, nor songs that sirens sing,
44. For in the heart of the commandments, eternal truths cling.
45. Arise, O sons and daughters, of this prophetic age,
46. Turn the page of history, step onto the stage.
47. For you are the builders of the dawn, the architects of day,
48. In your hands, the anointed's tools, to sculpt a better way.
49. The journey is not one of ease, nor is it glory clad,
50. But walk it with integrity, and your hearts shall not be sad.

Psalm 237

A Psalm of MaBeYo:

1. You cry for redemption in these sprawling streets,
2. Seeking solace in comfort, a haven in feats.
3. But know, the Mashiach, doesn't bear golden seats,
4. Nor a dance of delight in your illusive retreats.
5. The foundation you've built, a house of frail cards,
6. Will tumble and fall, despite your guards.
7. All creeds and doctrines, under heavy shards,
8. Will scatter like chaff, from the threshing yards.
9. For there's one who comes, not to adorn,
10. But to uproot the false, the broken, the worn.
11. Heed the message, lest you be torn,
12. From the fabric of truth, since the world was born.
13. The Mashiach is here, not to coddle in embrace,
14. But to restore the covenant, and set the pace.
15. For a world remade, in dignity and grace,
16. Returning to the roots, to the sacred space.
17. The tumult of nations, the churches' plight,
18. Will dissolve into chaos, in the coming light.
19. And from the rubble, clear and bright,
20. Will rise the eternal Torah, the beacon of right.
21. His path is of justice, His way is of laws,
22. Given to Moshe, without pause.
23. On Sinai it was written, in the divine cause,
24. And stands immutable, without flaws.
25. The commandments alone, the world must heed,
26. For in them lies the path, the true creed.
27. Ignite your spirit, let your soul be freed,
28. In the wisdom of the ancient, is all you need.
29. For the time is near, the hour is nigh,

30. Look not for salvation, in the sky.
31. But in the words of old, that never die,
32. The words of Hashem, the Most High.
33. So gather your strength, and stand upright,
34. In the face of the storm, be the light.
35. For the righteous path, is always in sight,
36. Guided by the Torah, day and night.

Psalm 238

A Psalm of MaBeYo:

1. You clamor for redemption, with fervor in your plea,
2. Yet know, the path to freedom isn't one of luxury.
3. The one you seek, Mashiach, doesn't ride on clouds of gold,
4. He walks among the ruins, where the tales of truth unfold.
5. Foundations you have trusted, will tremble and will sway,
6. The house of cards you cherish, shall crumble in dismay.
7. All doctrines you've embraced, shall meet a fated fall,
8. And from the ashes rises, one eternal law for all.
9. For in the wilderness of Sinai, a covenant was made,
10. Commandments etched in stone, in hearts they're meant to fade.
11. The word of HaShem, an anchor, steadfast in stormy gales,
12. A lighthouse for the lost, when every human structure fails.
13. Misguided souls, awaken from your slumber deep and long,
14. The melodies of truth are far different from your song.
15. The Mashiach's hand isn't gentle, but a force that will renew,
16. Stripping away the falsehoods, revealing what is true.
17. Heed now these words, for time is drawing near,
18. The final redemption beckons, the message is crystal clear.
19. Return to the sacred commandments, let them guide your way,
20. For in their adherence lies the dawn of a brighter day.
21. Let not your hearts be troubled, nor in vain traditions trust,
22. Seek the path of righteousness, in every deed and just.
23. For Mashiach is not a savior, to bear you in his flight,
24. But a harbinger of justice, turning darkness into light.
25. Cast away the chaff of creed, that clouds the divine,
26. Embrace the core of virtue, where true souls align.
27. The journey is one of rigor, through narrow straits we pass,
28. Each step a move towards sanctity, each breath like fragile glass.
29. As the world you know dismantles, piece by scattered piece,

30. Hold fast to the eternal, for therein lies your peace.
31. For the word of HaShem is unyielding, a fortress none can sway,
32. And in its hallowed wisdom, find the strength to face the day.

Psalm 239

A Psalm of MaBeYo:

1. In lands afar and days of yore, a voice did cry, a deep uproar.
2. O children born of earthly kin, your deeds do mark, your sins within.
3. Not bound by fathers' wayward path, each soul's own deeds incite the wrath.
4. Turn, turn from darkness to the light, for each own soul shall meet its plight.
5. A righteous man, his way is just, in laws divine he places trust.
6. On mountains high he does not tread, nor wicked feast lure his stead.
7. The poor and needy he does aid, no usury's hand has he played.
8. His hand retracts from doing wrong, in judgment fair he stands strong.
9. He follows paths of laws divine, eternal life shall then be thine.
10. But lo! The son may choose to stray, in blood and theft he'll waste away.
11. The mountains high he shall deface, the poor and needy he'll disgrace.
12. In perversions deep, his soul encased, far from the law, his steps misplaced.
13. Should this son then bear the sin, or father's guilt begin within?
14. Each soul alone shall bear its mark, from first drawn breath till deathly dark.
15. Yet if the wicked turns away, from all his sins, to light's pure ray,
16. And keeps the statutes, does what's just, he shall revive, in this trust.
17. No more shall former sins enslave, he's born anew, strong and brave.
18. His spirit free, like dawn's first light, from darkest night to morning bright.
19. Yet you say, 'The way's not fair,' O Israel, do you not dare?
20. To see each soul as its own, for your own deeds you shall atone.
21. As I live, says the Sovereign Guide, delight not in the sinner's stride.

22. But rather in his turn from grave, that he may live, be strong and brave.
23. And so, turn back from paths of pain, let righteousness in you remain.
24. For why should you choose deathly fate, when life awaits, it's not too late?
25. Yet, if the righteous turns to sin, and does all things that are unclean,
26. Shall he then live? No, he shall die, his righteous acts all gone awry.
27. His treacherous deeds upon him lay, in his sin's path, he'll fade away.
28. But if the wicked turns from sin, he'll live to life, new breath begin.
29. Still, you say the way's not just, in Divine decree you must trust.
30. For each will bear their own load, upon this earth we've all strode.
31. So, turn and live, do not rebel, from paths of grief, from ways of hell.
32. I call you now to life so sweet, where hope and love and justice meet.
33. Let not your spirit be consumed, by bitter past or future doomed.
34. Arise, awake from slumber deep, the path of life is yours to keep.
35. For I decree a future bright, for those who walk in laws of light.
36. The covenant eternal stands, for all who heed its just commands.
37. So let this psalm to you unfold, a tale of choices, new and old.
38. The path you choose shall lead your fate, through open gates or sealed gate.
39. A call to all, both near and far, to seek the light, to heal the scar.
40. O children of the final age, turn now the page, embrace your stage.

Psalm 240

A Psalm of MaBeYo:

1. Hearken, ye children of the dusk and dawn,
2. The path of old, by many trodden and worn.
3. In the beginning, a covenant was sworn,
4. Promises made, yet the heart remains torn.
5. From lands of bondage to a promised rest,
6. A journey of trials, a definitive test.
7. Yet, in moments of despair and protest,
8. Forget not the One who knows best.
9. With idols of old, hearts led astray,
10. Ignoring the signs, to their own dismay.
11. Fire and brimstone on that destined day,
12. A reckoning for those who sway.
13. Yet, mercy prevails in the midst of wrath,
14. A narrow path laid for those who do the math.
15. Remember the days of the wilderness path,
16. And the blessings that follow the aftermath.
17. For the children of the covenant are not alone,
18. The spirit amongst them, eternally sown.
19. A promise of return to a land once known,
20. Gathering the scattered, no more to roam.
21. But hear this warning, loud and clear,
22. The hour is near, the message to revere.
23. Walk not in the shadows of fear,
24. For the day of salvation is almost here.
25. The mountains will tremble, the rivers reverse,
26. As the script of the heavens begins to disperse.
27. All creation watches, the universe immerse,
28. In a tale of redemption, chapter and verse.
29. Stand firm in faith, let not your spirit bend,

30. For the trials you face are but means to an end.
31. With every hardship, a message to send,
32. Guiding you closer to the One to defend.
33. In the wilderness, a voice cries out,
34. Preparing the way, removing all doubt.
35. A path made straight, a resounding shout,
36. "Return, O children, from your route."
37. For the heart that repents, a new chapter begins,
38. A story of hope, washing away sins.
39. As the cycle of time inevitably spins,
40. The final redemption slowly grins.
41. Like the phoenix from ashes, arise anew,
42. Clad in righteousness, virtues true.
43. Embrace the dawn, bid the night adieu,
44. For the covenant eternal, to renew.
45. Hear O heavens, and give ear, O earth,
46. The tale of rebirth, a divine mirth.
47. From the lowest valley to the highest berth,
48. Witness the wonder, a new world's birth.
49. But woe to those who turn away,
50. Ignoring the signs, come what may.
51. A price to pay, on the judgment day,
52. For all deeds done, in the light or gray.
53. The earth shall quake, the sky shall roar,
54. A final chance, to settle the score.
55. The humble lifted, the proud no more,
56. Balance restored, as was before.
57. So heed the lessons of history's page,
58. The battle between wisdom and rage.
59. The choice is yours, to engage,
60. In a dance of destiny, or a war to wage.

61. Remember the journey from the land of chains,
62. Through seas of change and desert plains.
63. The covenant made, the law that reigns,
64. A lineage of faith, in your veins.
65. As the eagle soars, so shall you,
66. Above the storm, a panoramic view.
67. A destiny grand, a mission true,
68. A calling to the chosen few.
69. So rise, O children of the promise,
70. Embrace the light, dispel the darkness.

Psalm 241

A Psalm of MaBeYo:

1. In the city where echoes rise, a tale of woe and sin surmise,
2. Blood within its streets doth stain, cries of the pure and pained sustain.
3. Leaders like ravenous wolves at night, prey on the weak, forsaking the light,
4. Prophets veil truth with unseeing eyes, while the city in its corruption lies.
5. The silver has become dross, the land's purity is but loss,
6. In the furnace of affliction and fear, the call for the righteous to draw near.
7. Hear, O people, the decree, a land that is not free,
8. From bloodshed to deceit, a cycle they endlessly repeat.
9. In the midst of turmoil, stand, a remnant with clean hands,
10. They shall be the smith's delight, glowing in the refining night.
11. As silver is purged of its dross, so too the wicked shall face loss,
12. The righteous flame will shine so bright, illuminating the darkest night.
13. O city of the tarnished crown, look to the skies, bow down,
14. For in your midst, a fire rages, written of in ancient pages.
15. The dross shall melt away, in the refining fire's sway,
16. And what is left shall be pure, steadfast, righteous, and sure.
17. But woe to those who turn the cheek, to the poor, the widow, and the meek,
18. Your judgments are but chaff in the wind, a testimony to the sins you've pinned.
19. The wrath is kindled, the fire hot, for all the iniquities you've wrought,
20. Yet still, the call for repentance cries, before the final sun sets and dies.

21. Repent, O land of shadowed bane, wash away your crimson stain,
22. Let justice roll like mighty streams, awaken from your wicked dreams.
23. For the day of cleansing is at hand, a day that will purify the land,
24. A remnant shall rise from the ash, their spirits bold, their actions brash.
25. They shall rebuild the ancient ruins, their hearts set on noble doings,
26. The city shall once again be gold, a testament to the bold.
27. But let the wicked forsake their way, lest they perish in the day,
28. When the earth shall disclose her blood, and no longer shall cover the mud.
29. Return, O children of the strife, choose the path, the way of life,
30. Lest the fire consume your dross, and all your gains become but loss.
31. The time is near, the choice is clear, walk in love or cower in fear,
32. For every deed shall be weighed, in the balance of the promises made.
33. So let the righteous hold fast, for their reward shall come at last,
34. A crown of beauty they shall receive, for in the truth they did believe.
35. Yet the city weeps within its soul, for the price of pride takes its toll,
36. But even now, says the flame, "Return, and I shall heal your blame."
37. For I desire mercy, not sacrifice, a contrite heart, your only price,
38. Walk humbly with thy God, and on the holy path, you trod.
39. Remember, O city, your ancient call, to be a light unto all,
40. Rise from your slumber, shake off the dust, for in the Divine you must trust.
41. The days of reckoning draw near, yet with it, do not fear,
42. For those who stand in righteous might, shall shine like stars in the night.

43. So heed the words of ancient lore, open wide your heart's door,
44. For in the midst of the darkest days, lies the path to righteous ways.
45. Thus ends the cry of the land, a plea for the cleansing hand,
46. May wisdom's voice forever guide, and in your hearts, may it abide.

Psalm 242

A Psalm of MaBeYo:

1. In the midst of streets forsaken, lies the truth so often shaken,
2. Prophets' words, like thunder, breaking, cry against the moral flaking.
3. Leaders of the land, now hear! Your days of judgment drawing near,
4. You've devoured souls in your feast, from the greatest to the least.
5. Priests who tread the sacred halls, twist the Law to suit their calls,
6. People's cries ascend on high, beneath the watchful, weeping sky.
7. See the widow's silent tear, sense the orphan's growing fear,
8. For your silver towers high, justice you have let pass by.
9. In this hour, dark and grim, seek the path that leads to Him,
10. Let not pride nor greed ensnare, turn your hearts to earnest prayer.
11. Lest the land be stripped and bare, He seeks one to stand, to care,
12. Yet if none shall mend the breach, who will stay the wrath, and teach?

Psalm 243

A Psalm of MaBeYo:

1. Hark! The woods whisper, a tale unfolds,
2. A mighty empire, with hearts so cold.
3. Their reach is vast, their grip is tight,
4. But the humble heart holds a guiding light.
5. Woe to those who decree unjust laws,
6. Who pen sorrow and don't pause.
7. They crush the needy, the widow's sigh,
8. Yet in their arrogance, they pass by.
9. The Day is near, the proud to dismay,
10. Their false idols will crumble away.
11. A remnant shall return, a faithful band,
12. Planted in Zion, in their promised land.
13. Oh ye, who wield power like a rod,
14. Remember, there is but one God.
15. He shall cut down the briers with fire,
16. In humility's ashes, find your desire.
17. Fear not, O little flock, so meek,
18. Your justice, your redemption, you shall seek.
19. From the ashes of despair, hope will bloom,
20. A new dawn to dispel the gloom.
21. The yoke shall break, burdens be gone,
22. On that day, a new song is sung.
23. The poor and needy, their spirits soar,
24. No oppressor to fear, no more.
25. Behold the mountains, the cedars tall,
26. Even the mightiest, destined to fall.
27. But the faithful seed, deep roots they send,
28. Their lineage, their legacy, will never end.
29. The wolf and lamb, in peace they'll lie,

30. Under the watchful, merciful sky.
31. For the world shall heal, love will reign,
32. In the whispered promise of the forest's refrain.

Psalm 244

A Psalm of MaBeYo:

1. Harken now, ye near and far, To wisdom's voice, a guiding star.
2. Let the wicked forsake his way, And unrighteous thoughts delay.
3. As heavens high above the earth, So are ways of sacred worth.
4. Seek the Lord while He may be found, In His grace, you'll be unbound.
5. As rain falls down and snow from sky, So shall His word, never to lie.
6. It will not return empty, but fulfill, The purpose and the sovereign will.
7. Thorns and briars once did thrive, Now myrtle blooms, spirits revive.
8. A sign eternal, never to cease, A path to everlasting peace.
9. For as thoughts are not our own, His ways, a mystery, flown.
10. As rivers turn, and mountains bow, So to His will, all shall avow.
11. In joy, go out; in peace, be led, Mountains and hills, their chorus spread.
12. The trees of the field will clap their hands, As justice and mercy fill all lands.
13. Turn to the Lord, for He is kind, In Him alone, solace find.
14. His mercy vast, His pardon sure, To contrite hearts, He'll be the cure.
15. Let nations come from ends of earth, To proclaim His righteousness and worth.
16. For a covenant He has given, a witness to be, A light to nations, salvation free.
17. So hear, O earth, the decree divine, Walk the path of the sacred line.
18. The time is near, redemption's song, Join the chorus, the holy throng.

Psalm 245

A Psalm of MaBeYo:

1. Heed the call, O house of legacy, born pure in name,
2. Cloaked in heritage, yet tarnished by the flame.
3. Foretold deeds from the beginning, from ancient days declare,
4. Words were not in secret, in your midst, they laid them bare.
5. Shaped in silver, yet chose the dross, O stubborn heart,
6. Refusing the path laid out from the start.
7. Now hear, O ears that were closed, see the signs unfold,
8. The ancient truths, now anew, are boldly told.
9. For the sake of His Name, He delays wrath, and for His praise restrain,
10. Lest you vanish like smoke, in your follies lain.
11. Purged for His sake, your errors He refines,
12. None other shall share the glory that is solely Divine.
13. Harken to these words, O Jacob, Israel whom He calls,
14. You're His from the start, lest you stumble and fall.
15. He is the First, also the Last, His hand laid the earth's span,
16. His right hand spread the heavens, when He calls they stand.
17. Gather and listen, descendants of Jacob, near and far,
18. He is the One who declares the end from the start.
19. His decision stands, He will do all His pleasure,
20. From the east, He calls a bird, its course He measures.
21. Speak in righteousness, declare it bold,
22. None other god beside Him, from of old.
23. Turn to Him and be saved, ends of the earth, for He is God,
24. Just and a Savior, none else treads where He trod.
25. Sworn by Himself, a word gone forth in righteousness sure,
26. That to Him, every knee shall bow, every tongue assure.

Psalm 246

A Psalm of MaBeYo:

1. O hear, ye nations, far and wide, The tale of hubris, fallen pride.
2. A mighty city, dressed in gold, Her secrets and her sins untold.
3. "I am eternal," so she claimed, Ignoring the humble, the maimed.
4. She sat as a queen on her throne, Believing she'd never be dethroned.
5. But justice comes to high and low, The Creator's decree, it shall flow.
6. "No more shall you revel in night, For I will expose you to the light."
7. The young and the old shall hear, A lesson of God, crystal clear.
8. Pride comes before a mighty fall, Hear the whisper, the divine call.
9. "Come down, sit in the dust," He says, Your crown is gone, end of your days.
10. The veil of your secrets, now torn, In nakedness and shame, you'll mourn.
11. Evil pursued you like a storm, You thought your magic would transform.
12. But sorceries and spells shall fail, And over truth, they shall not prevail.
13. Keep on with your enchantments vain, Your wise men, let them wrack their brain.
14. They are like stubble; fire consumes, Not one can save you from your dooms.
15. See, all your lovers flee away, No one to save you on that day.
16. You trusted in your wickedness, "No one sees," your false confess.
17. But He who sits above sees all, And before Him, the proud shall fall.
18. O city once in purple robed, Look now how your glory's probed.
19. Thus ends the tale of those who stray, From the path, the righteous way.
20. Let this be a lesson to all who rise, Humility is the truly wise.

Psalm 247

A Psalm of MaBeYo:

1. In ages past, the idols stood, with hearts of stone, misunderstood,
2. Their makers blind, with burdened backs, trod weary roads, in fading tracks.
3. Yet, hear the words, from the throne so high, He declares the end from days gone by.
4. The One who is, who was, shall be, calls out to all, "Return to Me."
5. With gentle might, His voice resounds, across the earth, His grace abounds.
6. "I am the First, the Last, the same," proclaims the Lord, "I call each name."
7. The eagles soar, at His command, no power lost, from His strong hand.
8. Kings rise and fall, at His decree, yet, in His arms, the weak shall flee.
9. The idols fall, their gold is dust, in God alone, the righteous trust.
10. He bears us up, from birth to age, our Rock, our Portion, through every stage.
11. "Remember this, and show yourselves men; bring it again to mind, O ye transgressors."
12. "I am God, and there is none like Me," His words an anchor, in stormy sea.
13. From ancient times, His counsel stands, shaping the world, with gentle hands.
14. His purpose firm, none can delay, the words He speaks, the night turns day.
15. "Listen, you stubborn-hearted, who are far from righteousness,"
16. "I bring near My righteousness, not far off, and My salvation shall not tarry."
17. For He plants the heavens, lays foundations on the earth,
18. Sustains the spirit within us, claims us, knowing our worth.

19. The idols crumble, their silver tarnished, their prayers but wind, their pleas are vanished.
20. Yet, God remains, His promise sure, to guide, to save, to heal, to cure.
21. "Listen to me, you who know righteousness, the people in whose heart is My law;"
22. "Fear not the reproach of men, nor be dismayed at their revilings."
23. For as the heavens vanish, and the earth grows old, His salvation shines, His story told.
24. So, heed the echo of eternity, walk in His ways, embrace your destiny.

Psalm 248

A Psalm of MaBeYo:

1. In a land of ancient wonders, tyranny held tight its grip,
2. The people cried in bondage, yearning for leadership.
3. A voice emerged from the silence, a promise firm and bold,
4. Declaring freedom's birthright, as ancient tales foretold.
5. He who commands the morning, whispered to the meek,
6. "I have seen your affliction, and a deliverer you shall seek."
7. With staff in hand, the humble stood before the tyrant's throne,
8. Signs and wonders to display, the power of the Divine shown.
9. Rivers turned to scarlet, a plague upon the land,
10. Frogs and creatures followed, by the Almighty's command.
11. Dust rose up as lice, the air thick with flies,
12. Livestock fell in heaps, a sight before their eyes.
13. Boils marked the wicked, hail shattered the calm,
14. Locusts devoured the fields, a relentless, consuming swarm.
15. Darkness veiled the sun, a shadow over the heart,
16. Warning of the final plague, the most grievous to impart.
17. "Let my people go," was the echoed, resolute cry,
18. "Or the firstborn of your land, in their sleep shall die."
19. Resistance met with sorrow, the inevitable dawn,
20. A night of vigilant watch, as a new day was born.
21. Freedom's song was whispered, in the ear of every slave,
22. "Hurry now, for redemption, is on its way."
23. Unleavened bread their portion, staffs held in their hand,
24. Departing from oppression, to the promised land.
25. Through the sea they journeyed, walls of water stood firm,
26. Pursuers met their end, as the tides began to turn.
27. Songs of liberation, across the shores did ring,
28. For in the heart of the oppressed, hope forever springs.
29. Yet, in freedom's wake, the path was not clear,

30. Tests and trials awaited, feeding doubt and fear.
31. The lesson of the journey, through miracle and plight,
32. Is that deliverance comes not easy, but at the end of the night.
33. So heed the voice of wisdom, let it guide your way,
34. Remember the chains of bondage, from which you've come away.
35. Walk with humble hearts, under the sky so vast,
36. For the lessons of the past, shape the future's cast.
37. In the whispers of the wind, in the rustling leaves,
38. The stories of old, find new life, new belief.
39. The echoes of redemption, in every heart resonate,
40. As we journey forth, to meet our collective fate.
41. The plagues that once were, lessons they impart,
42. About the strength within us, and the compassion in our heart.
43. For in every challenge, lies an opportunity,
44. To rise above, to embrace our unity.
45. As the river turned to blood, let us remember to sustain,
46. Cherish all life's waters, let not neglect remain.
47. As frogs covered the land, let our voices rise,
48. Speak against injustice, let truth be our guide.
49. As lice and flies swarmed, let cleanliness be sought,
50. In body and in spirit, let good health be not for naught.
51. When livestock fell and boils rose, let us care for living things,
52. For in their well-being, our humanity sings.
53. As hail and locusts ravaged, let us protect our home,
54. Earth, our precious garden, let its bounty be known.
55. When darkness veiled the sun, let us find the light within,
56. Ignite the spark of hope, let a new day begin.
57. In the face of the final plague, let us hold our loved ones dear,
58. Cherish every moment, for life is but a tear.
59. As the sea parted ways, let us pave paths of peace,
60. So that all may journey forward, and oppression may cease.

61. The story of redemption, is not just of the past,
62. It's the song of the future, its notes far and vast.
63. For every generation, faces tyranny's face,
64. And in every heart, lies the power of grace.
65. So let us walk together, in the light of the Divine,
66. With a promise of liberation, for all of humankind.
67. And though the road is winding, and the night is long,
68. Let the echoes of redemption, be our guiding song.
69. For we are the children, of a mighty, loving hand,
70. Journeying together, to the promised land.

Psalm 249

A Psalm of MaBeYo:

1. In lands afar and oceans wide, a tale unfolds of haughty pride,
2. A mighty nation, vast and strong, forgot to whom they truly belong.
3. "I am a god," the ruler claimed, amidst wealth and power, unrestrained.
4. But from the north, a whisper came, a voice that set the stars aflame.
5. "Mortal you are, and so shall be, your end will come, then you will see."
6. The seas will roar, the earth will quake, at the arrogance mankind dares to take.
7. To the river's bend and reeds so tall, a message sent to make proud hearts fall.
8. "Your crooked justice, your twisted law, shall bring upon you a gaping maw."
9. Behold the beast from waters deep, awakened now from ancient sleep.
10. Its scales of justice, sharp and fair, will weigh your deeds in desolate air.
11. "Your rivers dry, your harvests fail," declares the voice in a mournful wail.
12. "For you have claimed what's not your own, atop a borrowed, crumbling throne."
13. "Remember now, O fallen star, how fleeting all your glories are."
14. Your wealth, your power, your borrowed time, all swept away in a cosmic rhyme.
15. The nations watch, the people see, the downfall of your vanity.
16. "I will restore," the voice intones, "the humble heart, the broken bones."
17. The exiled ones, with hopeful eyes, look to the skies for their sun to rise.

18. "Their land, their home, I shall renew, and show the world what's just and true."
19. But woe to those who scorn the plight, of justice's march, of righteous might.
20. Their monuments, their golden halls, shall crumble fast and surely fall.
21. "I scatter seeds on fertile ground, where once were thorns, now blessings found."
22. "My river flows, it cleanses deep, it gives the weary, peaceful sleep."
23. The cedar tall, the hyssop low, together in my garden grow.
24. No more shall pride their fates entwine, for humbled hearts are truly mine.
25. Let nations learn from history's page, the folly of the tyrant's rage.
26. Let kings and queens and all in power, heed the lesson of this hour.
27. The dragon's fate, a solemn sign, of what awaits the end of time.
28. When arrogance meets its bitter end, and to the dust, it shall descend.
29. Rejoice, O humble, lift your voice, for in your meekness, you'll rejoice.
30. The tyrant's fall, the poor man's rise, a tale as old as earth and skies.
31. Heed this tale, O final kin, as the age of endings soon begin.
32. Let righteousness your hearts compel, to turn from paths that lead to hell.
33. "For in the end, all shall see, the mighty bowed on bended knee."
And peace shall reign, and love shall bind, the hearts of all mankind.

Psalm 250

A Psalm of MaBeYo:

1. In the valleys where whispers turn to streams,
2. A tale unfolds, as ancient as the seams.
3. Of a covenant cast in sacred trust,
4. A dance of faith, love, and righteous dust.
5. Behold the heavens, bear witness, earth's span,
6. To the echoes of words from the Great Plan.
7. Let my teaching drop like the gentle rain,
8. My utterance flow like dew on the plain.
9. I'll declare the name, of the Ageless One,
10. Ascribe greatness, to our shield, our sun.
11. The Rock, His deeds perfect, all His ways just,
12. A God of faith, without iniquity or lust.
13. Remember the days, consider the years,
14. Generations pass, His guidance clears.
15. Ask your father, he will show the path,
16. Elders will tell, of the aftermath.
17. When the Most High gave nations their place,
18. And divided mankind, He showed His grace.
19. He set the boundaries of the peoples,
20. According to the number of His steeples.
21. The Lord's portion is His people's fold,
22. Jacob the allotment of His stronghold.
23. He found them in a desert land, in howling waste,
24. He encircled them, He cared, with haste.
25. He guarded them as the pupil of His eye,
26. As an eagle stirs its nest, hears its young's cry.
27. He spread His wings, caught them, bore them high,
28. Alone He led them, with no foreign ally.
29. They ate the produce of the field's yield,

30. He gave them honey, milk, from the land he sealed.
31. The rock poured oil, and their grain was fine,
32. Wine of the vine, from the purest vine.
33. But Jeshurun grew fat and kicked in turn,
34. You grew thick, covered with fat, did not discern.
35. They forsook God who made them, forgot the Rock,
36. Stirring jealousy with strange gods, to their own shock.
37. To demons they sacrificed, not to God,
38. To gods they never knew, to new sod.
39. Rock that bore you, you were unmindful,
40. And forgot the God who gave you life, not dreadful.
41. And He saw, and spurned them, because of the provocation,
42. His sons and daughters, led to abomination.
43. He said, "I will hide my face from them, see what their end will be,
44. For they are a perverse generation, children in whom is no loyalty.
45. They made me jealous with what is not God,
46. Angered me with their idols, abroad.
47. I'll make them jealous with those not a people,
48. Provoke them with a foolish nation, under the steeple.
49. My anger is kindled, burns to the lowest hell,
50. Consumes the earth, its increase as well, bells tell.
51. I'll heap disasters, my arrows I'll spend,
52. Exhausted, hungry, and consumed, no more to fend.
53. I'll send the teeth of beasts, venom of crawlers,
54. Outside, the sword bereaves, at home, terror prowlers.
55. I would have said, "I'll dash them, erase memory,"
56. But for the enemy's taunt, lest they act contrary.
57. They're a nation void of counsel, no understanding,
58. O that they were wise, discerning, commanding.
59. They would understand their latter end,
60. How one chases a thousand, two put ten thousand to bend.

61. For their Rock sold them, the Lord gave them up,
62. Their rock is not like our Rock, even our enemies cup.
63. Their vine's from Sodom, fields of Gomorrah,
64. Grapes of gall, clusters bitter, sorrow's era.
65. The venom of dragons, cruel wine of asps,
66. Isn't this stored up with me, says the Lord, in grasps?
67. Vengeance is mine, recompense, in due time their foot will slip,
68. For the day of their calamity is near, the doom to grip.
69. The Lord will judge His people, have compassion on His servants,
70. When He sees their power is gone, none shut or open, currents.
71. He'll say, "Where are their gods, the rock they took refuge in?"
72. The ones who ate the fat of their sacrifices, joined in sin.
73. Let them rise and help you, be your protection,
74. See now that I, even I, am He, perfection.
75. There's no god beside me, I put to death, bring to life,
76. I wound, I heal, none delivers from my strife.
77. I lift my hand to heaven, say, "As I live forever,
78. If I sharpen my glittering sword, my hand takes hold on judgment, clever.
79. I'll take vengeance on my adversaries, repay those who hate me,
80. I'll make my arrows drunk with blood, my sword devour flesh, see.
81. With the blood of the slain and captives,
82. From the long-haired heads of the enemy raptives.
83. Rejoice, O nations, with His people,
84. For He avenges the blood of His servants, topples.
85. He takes vengeance on His adversaries,
86. Makes atonement for His land and properties.
87. So sing, O heavens, with His people below,
88. Let all God's creation, His justice show.
89. He will avenge, love, and forgive,
90. His mercy great, through which we live.

91. Remember this song, let it be a sign,
92. For it's not an idle word, it's your life's line.
93. Teach it to your children, let them know,
94. The deeds of the Eternal, His covenant's glow.
95. Let the earth hear, the skies above descend,
96. For the song echoes, from start to end.
97. It's a witness for you, lest you forget,
98. The covenant made, since the day we met.
99. So keep His statutes, live in His shade,
100. For by His word, the foundations were laid.
101. Rejoice, O heavens, earth, join the roar,
102. Mountains break forth, seas, and all that's in store.
103. For He avenges His people's blood, takes pity on His servants,
104. Bringing justice to the land, and peace to the observants.
105. As the song ends, so does the plea,
106. To walk in His ways, for eternity.
107. The story old, yet ever new,
108. Calls each heart, both me and you.
109. For in the echoes of the covenant's song,
110. Lies the hope, where we all belong.
111. Heed the voice, let it resonate deep,
112. For in His promise, all blessings we reap.
113. In His path, let wisdom be your guide,
114. For in His teachings, life is amplified.
115. Cling to the truth, let it not depart,
116. For it's the lifeblood of every heart.
117. May the melody of righteousness fill the air,
118. And the harmony of justice be our collective prayer.
119. Walk in the light of the eternal flame,
120. And let each step glorify His name.

Psalm 251

A Psalm of MaBeYo:

1. In a land of milk and honey, they will dwell,
Abundance they'll embrace, in comfort swell.
2. Yet hearts may turn, to idols, they'll be drawn,
Forgetting the rock from whence they were hewn.
3. With foreign gods, their faith will stray,
“And My anger shall blaze on that day.”
4. “I'll hide my face,” for they've spurned the pact,
In dire straits, they'll feel the impact.
5. Many evils and troubles will be their fate,
They'll say, "Is it not because our God does abate?"
6. Assemble the elders, let this testament hear,
Of a covenant broken by those once near.
7. My words shall echo through mountains and stones,
A witness against them, down to their bones.
8. “For I know their inclinations, even now as I speak,”
Even before they've tasted the land they seek.
9. “Write this song, let it be their guide,
A reminder of the path” from which they shouldn't slide.
10. “Teach it to the children,” let it flow in their blood,
So they may not sink in the forgetful flood.
11. In the land of their ancestors dreams so bright,
“May this song keep them aligned in My sight.”
12. Hear, O heavens, and give ear, earth's floor,
May these words not vanish, but forevermore.

Psalm 252

A Psalm of MaBeYo:

1. Gather now ye folks of valor, heed the words that are divine,
In the land of milk and honey, where the sun doth always shine.
2. Bound by oath, we stand together, kin of old and youth so bright,
In our midst, the sacred covenant, guides us from the day to night.
3. Not with us alone, the pact was made, but with those yet unborn,
Every soul that treads upon this earth, from the first break of morn.
4. Lest there be, within our hearts, a root that bears the gall,
Turning from the path so bright, into the darkness fall.
5. Hear, O heavens, listen earth, to the words of solemn lore,
Turn not to the gods of naught, that lead to the grievous shore.
6. If one thinks, in heart so wayward, "I shall walk in my own path,"
The Lord will not forgive that soul, and turn away in wrath.
7. Bitter be the fruit of arrogance, that grows from seeds of spite,
A poison spreads through clans and tribes, turning day to blight.
8. Let not the wine of pride mislead, nor the brew of falsehood charm,
Stand firm in the covenant's grace, and keep away from harm.
9. Remember the mountains, the sky, the earth, witnesses of the vow,
They call to us, through time and space, urging to uphold it now.
10. Do not turn to idols, nor seek the comfort of lies,
For ruin lies in shadows, beneath the golden skies.
11. Let our words rise like incense, our prayers like morning dew,
In adherence to the sacred bond, forever strong and true.
12. For the Lord has chosen us, a treasure from all the lands,
To walk in ways of righteousness, holding forth our hands.
13. Be wary of the heart that strays, the spirit that disdains,
For they lead to desolation, where only silence reigns.
14. Let the nations see, in our walk, the light of truth so bold,
A beacon of hope and peace, as in the days of old.
15. The covenant calls us each by name, from the greatest to the least,

To banquet in the garden fair, and join the heavenly feast.

16. So let us walk in unity, in the law of love so deep,

For the Lord watches over His own, their souls He'll surely keep.

17. As the heavens arch above, so is the breadth of His grace,

Encompassing every wandering heart, in the human race.

18. So harken now, children of the covenant, to this divine call,

Walk humbly with your God, and in His mercy fall.

Psalm 253

A Psalm of MaBeYo:

1. Upon the edge of sacred words, where vows and hearts entwine,
In lands bestowed by solemn oaths, the people's fate aligns.
2. The voice from heights did thunder forth, a covenant to bind,
Commandments etched in living stone, in every heart enshrined.
3. "This day," proclaimed the humble guide, "befall your eyes and ears,"
A path of statutes, laws so wide, "to vanquish doubts and fears."
4. "Walk forth in ways of righteousness," a treasure to be held,
Amongst the nations rise and bless, in you, "my plans propelled."
5. As skies bear witness to the pact, the earth below does stir,
A chosen people, in their act, to history they confer.
6. With every step in sacred walk, their destiny unfolds,
In deeds and faith, they shall unlock, the promises of old.
7. "A holy nation," thus was said, "a priesthood of the pure,"
Instructed by the laws you're fed, your covenant secure.
8. So turn your hearts, embrace the light, your journey has begun,
On mountains high, in God's own sight, a new era is spun.
9. In words of ancient wisdom cast, the future brightly shown,
The people's vow, forever last, upon the stone is sown.

Psalm 254

A Psalm of MaBeYo:

1. In the land, when you settle your part,
Seek a leader with a humble heart.
2. Not for power, nor for horses' fleet,
But for justice, in the judgment seat.
3. Multiplying wealth, or wives, not his aim,
Lest his heart astray, in riches or fame.
4. A copy of the Law, by his side,
A guide to govern, and in truth abide.
5. Reading daily, in the Lord's decree,
So his heart won't lift in vanity.
6. His brethren's equal, under the sky,
Not above them, nor exalted high.
7. Long will he reign, in integrity,
His children blessed in prosperity.
8. In a kingdom grounded, in laws divine,
Peace and justice, through his line, will shine.
9. Seek not from afar, the one to lead,
But from your brethren, plant the seed.
10. So harmony and love may always dwell,
In lands where righteousness does swell.
11. Let not greed or pride, his path corrupt,
In sacred texts, let his eyes be sup't.
12. So he may lead with wisdom and grace,
And guide his people to a holy place.

Psalm 255

A Psalm of MaBeYo:

1. In the valley where whispers align, 'neath the mountain's towering pine,
2. There echoed a voice so divine, with words of a covenant fine.
3. "Hear, O people," the statutes so bright, the decrees that guide through the night,
4. From the mount, in a shroud of pure light, came laws for living outright.
5. Recall the fire on that day, how it lit our collective way,
6. A divine voice, in splendor did say, 'These commands you shall not betray.'
7. Remember, remember the flame, for His words are always the same,
8. A promise made, a sacred claim, to bring us all to righteous fame.
9. The voice declared without a form, amidst the thunder, wind, and storm,
10. 'I am yours, steadfast and warm, leading you past every norm.'
11. With awe and trembling, we stood near, the voice of our Protector clear,
12. 'Follow these words, hold them dear, and walk in ways that He holds near.'
13. 'No idols of silver or gold, only the truths that are bold,
14. Respect the Name, as told, a legacy forever to uphold.'
15. 'Honor the day of rest, keep it holy, as is best,
16. A sign of our eternal quest, in His peace, we are blessed.'
17. 'Honor your father and mother, love each as sister and brother,
18. So your days may be longer, on the land that's like no other.'
19. 'Do not bring life to an end, nor false witness ever bend,
20. Steal not, nor covet, nor pretend, on these commands you must depend.'
21. These words were not alone, they were etched in stone,

22. A covenant, not just thrown, but deeply, profoundly sown.
23. The voice ceased, yet still it rings, in our hearts, it ever sings,
24. A guide for peasants and for kings, to the blessings obedience brings.
25. The people in fear did stand, so Moses took the command,
26. 'Fear not, for His yoke is grand, leading you to the promised land.'
27. Moses, the leader, did relate, the statutes and laws to state,
28. Teaching us to navigate, the path that makes our lives great.
29. 'He spoke with fire and cloud, His presence ever so loud,
30. Yet in your hearts, He's endowed, His words, your protective shroud.'
31. 'Keep these decrees with care, let them guide you everywhere,
32. Let not your heart to despair, for His love is beyond compare.'
33. 'These words, a divine art, meant to be kept close to heart,
34. A guide, a map, a chart, from His path, never to depart.'
35. 'To the mountain, we drew near, with a reverent, holy fear,
36. The voice of our God to hear, His covenant ever so clear.'
37. Remember the fire, the smoke, the day our spirits awoke,
38. A people under His yoke, His words, a masterstroke.
39. 'Teach them to your children well, let their hearts in wisdom swell,
40. So in His promise they may dwell, and of His wonders, they will tell.'
41. The journey long, the path set right, by His words, we gain sight,
42. In His laws, we take flight, turning darkness into light.
43. 'As you sleep and as you rise, keep His word before your eyes,
44. It's your most precious prize, leading to the ultimate skies.'
45. The mountain shook, the earth did quiver, by His word, our souls deliver,
46. A bond that does not sever, a love that flows like a river.
47. 'Choose life, so you may live, to His statutes, your heart give,
48. For He has so much to give, in His grace, you will thrive.'
49. Moses spoke, the people heard, each heart by the covenant stirred,

50. 'Follow closely every word, let not His voice go unheard.'
51. The laws, a precious gift, our spirits to uplift,
52. On His path, we do not drift, for His ways are swift.
53. 'Your God is one, unique in might, in His laws take delight,
54. Walk by day and by night, in His word, find your light.'
55. 'He asks but to fear, love, and walk, in His ways, do not balk,
56. With Him, have your daily talk, on His path, proudly walk.'
57. Each command, a seed sown, in our hearts, fully grown,
58. By His light, we are shown, the love that we are shown.
59. 'Keep these words in your soul, let them make you whole,
60. On your journey, they're your goal, in His book, you're enrolled.'
61. The mountain's lesson, forever cast, in our memories vast,
62. A covenant built to last, to the future from the past.
63. 'Love the Lord with all your might, in darkness be the light,
64. His commandments are your right, leading to a future bright.'
65. 'Do not deviate left or right, keep His covenant in sight,
66. For in His word is your might, and in His law, your delight.'
67. As the heavens are high above, so is His enduring love,
68. With guidance from up above, we rise, we soar, we move.
69. So let us walk in His ways, in our hearts, His word stays,
70. In His love, we spend our days, His path, our eternal blaze.

Psalm 256

A Psalm of MaBeYo:

1. In a land of whispers, beneath the mount so high,
Held in awe and wonder, 'neath the ink-black sky.
2. The voice of the Eternal, without form did speak,
In a tempest of fire, making mighty mountains weak.
3. Words of life and promise, to a people chosen clear,
Commandments etched in essence, for those with ears to hear.
4. In the midst of flames, His covenant was told,
A sacred pact unbroken, more valued than fine gold.
5. Beware, oh ye seekers, of images so frail,
Craft not your hopes in forms, lest your hearts bewail.
6. For He who spoke in fire, is beyond earthly frame,
To worship sun or moon, is to kindle grievous shame.
7. Ye were shown no likeness, on the day of voice heard,
But heard the sounds of heaven, stirred by His holy word.
8. So hold fast to the unseen, to the voice that gave you breath,
For in it lies your purpose, beyond the shadow of death.
9. Remember the mountain, the fire, and the cloud,
How you stood in His presence, in awe, heads bowed.
10. Teach your children's children, of the wonders they did not see,
Of the voice that spoke in darkness, and the truth that set you free.
11. Let the nations have their idols, of silver, wood, and stone,
But you shall cling to the Voice, to the mighty One alone.
12. So as the stars in heavens, your legacy shall be,
A people of the word, from sea to shining sea.

Psalm 257

A Psalm of MaBeYo:

1. From the east to the west, under heavens' grand dome,
A servant beseeches, from this land to home.
2. He speaks of great deeds, the wonders beheld,
In whispers and cries, his heart is compelled.
3. "O let me pass over," the servant implores,
"To see the rich valleys, the bounteous shores."
4. Your strength and Your hand have wrought lands to bestow,
But to cross over Jordan, "I yearn to go."
5. Yet the decree stands firm, a word from on high,
"No further, dear servant, beneath this vast sky."
6. To a new leader's hand, "the charge shall be laid,"
"Fear not, for the people shall not be dismayed."
7. Up high on the mountain, he climbed to survey,
The lands that his kinfolk would tread on one day.
8. From Gilead to Dan, all spread out like a scroll,
The promise of ages, the end of his stroll.
9. "Take heart and be strong," do not fear or dread,
Lead them to the land that to you I have said.
10. Your eyes have now seen, but your feet shall not tread,
"Remember these words, and go forth," it was said.
11. The servant then turned, to the valley below,
His journey concluding, with a soft, twilight glow.
12. A legacy lasting, in stories and stones,
His spirit endures in the valleys and bones.
13. The people still whisper of the servant so dear,
Who led them with courage, and never with fear.
14. His plea and his journey, an enduring song,
A testament of faith, where the hearts belong.
15. So let us remember, as we venture forth,

The servant who led us from the south to the north.

16. His story, a beacon that guides through the night,

A symbol of hope, and of enduring might.

17. Now go, take the land, be strong in your quest,

Remember the servant who now lays at rest.

18. His words and his vision forever shall be,

A light unto nations, a promise to see.

Psalm 258

A Psalm of MaBeYo:

1. In lands afar and hearts so near, the truth does march, dispelling fear,
2. The humble soul in wisdom clad, finds joy when others may be sad.
3. False witness shall not rest in peace, for truth's light never shall cease,
4. The mockers dance in fleeting jest, while the wise man passes the test.
5. Instruction's voice calls out so clear, yet the foolish refuse to hear,
6. A gem of wisdom's rare delight, outshines the folly's darkest night.
7. A father's joy, a righteous child, walks not the path of the defiled,
8. With every step and every mile, a pure heart makes the journey worthwhile.
9. The slacker craves yet has not; the diligent lack no thought,
10. In every word and every deed, the wise plant a righteous seed.
11. The Lord's wrath is a fearsome sight, but His love endures, a guiding light,
12. In His wisdom, creation sings, beneath the shadow of His wings.
13. A foolish son is a father's woe, a sorrow only some may know,
14. Yet in the trials and the pain, wisdom's lessons become our gain.
15. A gentle word can soothe the soul, make broken spirits once more whole,
16. The path of right a steady course, for those who harness wisdom's force.
17. The poor man's walk, integrity bound, is richer than wealth unprofound,
18. Life's fleeting breath, a precious gift, with righteous deeds we uplift.
19. The wise in heart accept commands, but the prattling fool reprimands,
20. The friend of truth walks evermore, through heaven's gate, on golden shore.

21. Desire fulfilled is sweet to taste, but the soul of the faithless goes to waste,
22. The fear of the Lord leads to life, in its refuge, there's no strife.
23. Humble hearts obtain His grace, and in their trials, they find His face,
24. Wrath and fury, who can stand? But with wisdom, peace commands.
25. Let not the liar guide your way, for in darkness, you shall stray,
26. Hold fast to truth, embrace the light, and walk in wisdom's holy sight.

Psalm 259

A Psalm of MaBeYo:

1. In the wilderness of uncertainty, a journey begins, a path through seas of doubt,
2. Like a flock led by a faithful shepherd, so are the hearts yearning for deliverance.
3. Behold, the waters part, a testament to the unseen Hand, guiding in silent might,
4. In every ripple, a lesson of trust, in every wave, a whisper of faith.
5. As manna descends from the heavens, so does wisdom from above,
6. Nourishing not just the body, but the soul that seeks understanding.
7. In the arid desert, a rock struck, springs forth waters of hope,
8. Reminding the weary, in barren lands, life's essence can still flow.
9. Battles rise like Amalek, doubts as fierce as swords,
10. Yet, within the heart's stronghold, a deeper courage is stored.
11. Raise your hands in prayer, like the faithful leader on the hill,
12. For in the power of unity, broken spirits start to heal.
13. As pillars of cloud and fire guide through night and day,
14. So does the light of inner truth, illuminate our way.
15. In the symphony of the sea's collapse, a song of salvation is sung,
16. A melody of divine promise, on the lips of old and young.
17. For in every hardship faced, a hidden blessing lies,
18. A journey through the wilderness, under providence's watchful eyes.
19. In the chorus of deliverance, echoes of ancient tales,
20. Whispering to us, heirs of tomorrow, as history unveils.
21. Let us walk with hearts ablaze, in the footsteps of our forebearers' tread,
22. For the path they carved in sands of faith, is where our souls are led.
23. In the echoes of the shofar's blast, in the rustling desert wind,
24. Hear the call to redemption, as the final chapters begin.

25. So let us march with steadfast love, and with a truth that burns so bright,
26. For we are the children of the promise, bearers of the eternal light.
27. Let this psalm of journey and faith, be a beacon through the night,
28. Guiding the final generation, to a dawn of boundless light.

Psalm 260

A Psalm of MaBeYo:

1. Behold, in times of deepening shadows, where hidden arts thrive,
2. There rise men of mystery, with knowledge dark and alive.
3. They delve into secrets, ancient and profound,
4. Where celestial whispers and shadow creatures abound.
5. One, versed in the esoteric lore of old,
6. Wields the night's rituals, bold and uncontrolled.
7. With full moon's embrace, he calls forth the unseen,
8. Engaging many in practices, where intentions lean.
9. Another, a soul reborn from epochs past,
10. Claims ties to pharaohs, in shadows cast.
11. His power, a tempest, with force to bend reality,
12. Targets the chosen, with veiled malice and duality.
13. The first, a summoner of entities, dark and dire,
14. Channels energies malignant, with Amalek's fire.
15. Against the people of covenant, he directs his gaze,
16. With rituals that bind, and spirits that daze.
17. The second, a master of psychic assault,
18. With energies amassed, and reality's vault.
19. He strikes from afar, with precision and spite,
20. A threat to the light, in the encroaching night.
21. Yet, amidst these trials, a promise remains sure,
22. For the guardians of faith, their hearts pure.
23. The light of wisdom, a beacon so bright,
24. Shines through the darkness, with enduring might.
25. Let not your hearts falter, nor your spirits wane,
26. For the power of goodness, ever shall reign.
27. Stand firm in unity, with souls intertwined,
28. And the shadows will scatter, left far behind.
29. In the struggle between shadow and light,

30. Let us hold fast to what is just and right.
31. For the ultimate victory, in the unseen fight,
32. Lies not in might, but in the spirit's flight.
33. So heed this call, oh ye of steadfast faith,
34. Rally together, and set your gaze.
35. For in unity and love, our strength we find,
36. A fortress against the shadows, for all mankind.

Psalm 261

A Psalm of MaBeYo:

1. Behold, in the twilight of days, the path to redemption is laid with unity, love, and purpose divine,
2. Where brethren dwell together in harmony, there the light of the Divine does shine.
3. For not in solitude does one find strength, but in the chorus of souls intertwined,
4. Each soul, a spark of the Infinite, in their hearts, His essence they find.
5. Commandments, like threads of gold, weave us into a tapestry bright,
6. In the observance of these sacred deeds, our souls ascend to majestic heights.
7. Love, the cornerstone of our unity, reflects the Divine light within,
8. Illuminating the path toward redemption, where the final glory begins.
9. Our sages, bearers of wisdom, illuminate the path so clear,
10. Teaching that love for one another is HaShem's whisper we must hear.
11. For in every soul's embrace, the Divine Presence we revere,
12. Acknowledging the spark within, making the bonds of unity dear.
13. Like a mosaic of infinite pieces, each unique, yet part of the whole,
14. Our unity forms the divine image, in our collective soul.
15. Through mitzvahs, love, and righteous deeds, our purpose is defined,
16. Marching towards redemption, with the light of the Divine in mind.
17. In humility and reverence, our place in creation we see,
18. A grand design, a cosmic symphony, of divine harmony.
19. With every act of kindness, and every deed of care,
20. We mirror the divine spark within, a light beyond compare.
21. As we walk this path together, with Torah as our guide,

22. Let the wisdom of ages past, in our hearts reside.
23. For the journey is not solitary, but a shared destiny,
24. Towards a world illuminated, where the Divine Presence is free.
25. So let us join hands and hearts, in unity and love,
26. Guided by the light above, and the wisdom thereof.
27. For the stones of redemption are laid, with every act divine,
28. Paving the way for a future, where in His glory we'll shine.

Psalm 262

A Psalm of MaBeYo:

1. In the realm of fleeting shadows, where discord sows its seeds,
2. A proclamation for the ages, addressing the world's needs,
3. Calls forth from the depths of turmoil, a plea for unity's embrace,
4. To look beyond the veils of division, and see the human race.
5. From the corners of the earth, the scattered have been led,
6. Bearing tales of survival, of cultures rich and widespread,
7. A gathering of souls, from every land and sea,
8. United by a common thread, in their diversity.
9. Consider the lineage of old, a family tree of varied hue,
10. Born of different mothers, their destinies entwined and true,
11. A testament to the power of blending, of differences embraced,
12. In the very foundation of a people, diversity is traced.
13. Amidst the echoing canyons of today's relentless divide,
14. The notion that one's heritage could determine one's pride,
15. Stands as a challenge to our essence, to the truth we know deep,
16. That the value of a soul is not skin-deep.
17. In lands across the waters, where the sun sets and rises,
18. Amongst the hues of humanity, our spirit recognizes,
19. The infinite expressions of the divine spark within,
20. A symphony of existence, beyond the color of skin.
21. Let us not be swayed by the shallow currents of our age,
22. That seek to categorize, to define, and to cage,
23. For within the heart of every being, lies a light so pure,
24. A reflection of the eternal, of which we can be sure.
25. As the winds of change blow harshly, stirring fear and doubt,
26. A call for understanding and compassion rings out,
27. To see beyond the barriers, the labels that confine,
28. And recognize in each other, a design divine.
29. For are we not all wanderers, in this journey of life?

30. Seeking meaning and connection, amidst the strife,
31. Let the stories of our ancestors, of migrations far and wide,
32. Remind us of our shared path, side by side.
33. The trials of history, with its shadow and its light,
34. Teach us the value of empathy, to uphold what is right,
35. Against the tides of segregation, of prejudice and fear,
36. We must stand together, with a vision clear.
37. For the diversity amongst us, is not a cause for alarm,
38. But a treasure to be cherished, a charm,
39. A reflection of the boundless, of the infinite ways,
40. In which the sacred manifests, through our days.
41. Let not the voices of division, drown out the call to unite,
42. In the pursuit of justice, of what is good and right,
43. For in the embrace of our differences, lies our true strength,
44. A covenant of unity, spanning infinite length.
45. As we navigate the challenges, of a world torn asunder,
46. May we find in our hearts, a wonder,
47. At the beauty of creation, in its myriad forms,
48. And the potential for harmony, amidst the storms.
49. Let us cultivate a garden, where understanding can bloom,
50. Dispelling the shadows, the suspicion, and gloom,
51. With each act of kindness, each gesture of love,
52. We mirror the compassion, of the heavens above.
53. For the fabric of humanity, woven through time,
54. Is adorned with the threads, of the sublime,
55. Each color, each texture, adding to its grace,
56. A masterpiece of unity, in time and space.
57. In this moment of reckoning, let us choose to stand,
58. Hand in hand, across this land,
59. To celebrate our diversity, as a source of strength,
60. A testament to our shared destiny, at length.

61. Let the wisdom of the ages, guide us on our way,
62. To seek understanding, to listen, to sway,
63. Towards a future where every soul is seen,
64. For the inherent worth, that lies within.
65. So let this psalm be a beacon, in the night,
66. A call to awaken, to the plight,
67. Of a world in need of healing, of a vision renewed,
68. Where the bonds of humanity, are lovingly viewed.
69. As the guardians of tomorrow, it falls upon us to sow,
70. The seeds of unity and peace, to let them grow.

Psalm 263

A Psalm of MaBeYo:

1. In this era, where shadows lengthen and discord reigns,
2. Where brother against brother, a tragic pattern obtains,
3. A cry goes forth, piercing the night, calling for peace,
4. Urging a return to unity, for divisions to cease.
5. Look to the horizon, where the clouds of contention gather,
6. A storm brewed from mistrust, threatening to rather,
7. Tear apart the fabric of our shared humanity,
8. Igniting fires amongst the waters, a dire calamity.
9. From every corner of the earth, the scattered have been called,
10. Each bearing the divine image, uniquely installed,
11. A rich tapestry of life, in every hue and creed,
12. Proclaiming the sanctity of our collective seed.
13. Let us remember the ancient teachings, the wisdom of old,
14. From Malachi, a message, fervently bold,
15. Calling for justice, for the scales to be balanced right,
16. Urging us to honor the covenant, in the Divine's sight.
17. And from Amos, a shepherd, comes a warning clear,
18. That neglecting righteousness, brings judgment near,
19. A plea for fairness, for the oppressed to be lifted high,
20. Lest the land itself, in anguish, should cry.
21. Amidst these admonitions, a central theme rings true,
22. The pursuit of justice, and compassion due,
23. For when division and hatred, our hearts consume,
24. We walk in darkness, heading towards doom.
25. Yet, the call to rise now, is not one of despair,
26. But a rallying cry, for all willing to dare,
27. To stand together, against the tide of hate,
28. Before the gates of division, firmly shut the gate.
29. For within our grasp, lies the power to mend,

30. The rifts that divide, to bring them to an end,
31. To look beyond the surface, where fear resides,
32. And see instead, where the truth abides.
33. In the story of our ancestors, a lesson is found,
34. Of diversity embraced, a common ground,
35. Where different paths and origins, converge in one,
36. Under the gaze of the moon and sun.
37. Let us not be fooled by the illusions of our time,
38. That judge a person's worth, by the climb,
39. Of ancestry, or color, or the language spoken,
40. For by such measures, the divine image is broken.
41. In every heart, there lies a spark of the divine light,
42. A reminder of our duty, to uphold what is right,
43. To see in each other, not an enemy or a stranger,
44. But a fellow traveler, amidst the manger.
45. As we face the winds of challenge, blowing fierce and cold,
46. Let us wrap ourselves in the mantle of the bold,
47. The courage to love, to understand, to bridge the gap,
48. Before the chasm widens, beyond our map.
49. For the flames of division, though they may rise,
50. Can be quenched by the waters of compromise,
51. Where every voice is heard, every pain acknowledged,
52. In the pursuit of peace, our commitment polished.
53. Drawing from the lessons of Malachi and Amos, we find,
54. A call to justice, to leave no one behind,
55. For when society's fabric, by inequality is torn,
56. The very foundations of our world, are worn.
57. Let us then, with urgency, heed the call,
58. To build bridges, not walls,
59. For only together, can we weather the storm,
60. And transform the world, into a form.

61. Warm and welcoming, where the fires of hatred die,
62. And the clouds of division, from the sky, fly,
63. Where the air is filled with songs of peace,
64. And the waters of contention, finally cease.
65. Let this psalm serve as a beacon, a guide,
66. For the journey ahead, wide,
67. A reminder of the power, within each heart,
68. To choose unity, to make a new start.
69. For as the prophets have shown, with clarity and love,
70. The path to redemption, lies with the One above,
71. Guiding our steps, through the night, so dark,
72. Toward a dawn of unity, where hope leaves its mark.

Psalm 264

A Psalm of MaBeYo:

1. Hear, O peoples, the tremors of the earth beneath,
2. Where shadows grow long, and the winds whisper of grief.
3. In this hour of gathering storms, where hope seems frail,
4. A voice, ancient and urgent, across the ages does hail.
5. From the depths of despair, where our fears reside,
6. Comes a call to awaken, to choose a side.
7. Ezekiel saw a valley, bones dry and scattered wide,
8. A symbol of division, where unity had died.
9. But the spirit spoke of renewal, a breath to revive,
10. A nation reborn, together to strive.
11. Zechariah foresaw a city, besieged yet bold,
12. A beacon of peace, its story untold.
13. Amidst the nations' tumult, a promise was made,
14. Of a future where the light would not fade.
15. Isaiah envisioned a world, reborn from ash and dust,
16. Where swords into plowshares, in trust we must.
17. The lion and lamb, in peace would lie,
18. A vision so pure, it draws a sigh.
19. Yet, here we stand, on precipice high,
20. As the clouds of division, blot out the sky.
21. The air we breathe, thick with the storm's cry,
22. Where the laughter of our children, is met with a sigh.
23. For the specter of war, and bloodshed is nigh,
24. Amidst the innocence where our hopes lie.
25. But the call rings out, clear and true,
26. Urging us toward a path anew.
27. To rebuild the ruins, to plant the seed,
28. Of a future where unity is our creed.
29. For as the bones in the valley, can find life once more,

30. So can we rise, from despair's shore.
31. Let the walls that divide us, crumble and fall,
32. As we heed the ancient prophets' call.
33. Zechariah's city of peace, let it be our guide,
34. Where justice and love, in our hearts reside.
35. And Isaiah's dream of harmony, let it inspire,
36. A world reborn from the fire.
37. So let us march, with purpose and with grace,
38. Toward the dawning of a new embrace.
39. Where every soul, in unity, finds a place,
40. In the eternal dance, of time and space.
41. Where the echoes of prophets, in our hearts resound,
42. A call to gather, on common ground.
43. For the fires of division, though fierce they may rage,
44. Can be quenched by the wisdom, of the ancient page.
45. Let the spirit that moved, upon the valley so dry,
46. Breathe life into our souls, that we might never deny,
47. The power of unity, to heal and to restore,
48. Bringing together, what was apart before.
49. As Zechariah beheld, a city besieged yet unbroken,
50. Let us too, by such resilience, be outspoken,
51. That even in our darkest hour, hope remains alive,
52. A testament to our will, to thrive and to survive.
53. And as Isaiah dreamed, of a world made anew,
54. Where the wolf and lamb, together grew,
55. Let us envision such a peace, within our reach,
56. A lesson of harmony, for us to teach.
57. For though the night may darken, and the storm clouds loom,
58. And we find ourselves, amidst gloom,
59. A beacon shines forth, in the distance far,
60. Guiding us home, to where we are.

61. The prophecy of unity, not just a distant dream,
62. But a call to action, a recurring theme,
63. For in each heart lies, the capacity to mend,
64. The rifts that divide, to bring them to an end.
65. Let us, then, rise up, with a renewed spirit,
66. Embracing each other, with no limit.
67. For the prophecies of old, not merely tales of yore,
68. But blueprints for a future, worth striving for.
69. As we stand at the cusp, of unrest and fears,
70. Let us wipe away, the needless tears.
71. For within our grasp, lies a world so vast,
72. Where the lessons of the past, shape the future we cast.
73. Let the echoes of Ezekiel, Zechariah, and Isaiah,
74. Be the wind at our backs, as we aim higher.
75. To rebuild the ruins, to make right what was wrong,
76. Joining together, in a chorus strong.
77. For the divine spirit, seeks to dwell within,
78. A world united, free from sin.
79. Where each soul can find, its rightful place,
80. In the boundless grace, of the human race.
81. So let us heed the warning, the urgent call to action,
82. To bring about, a satisfaction.
83. Of a prophecy fulfilled, of a dream made real,
84. Through the strength of our unity, the power to heal.
85. For the storms of division, may threaten our shore,
86. But together we stand, stronger than before.
87. With each act of kindness, each word of peace,
88. We build a foundation, that will never cease.
89. The vision of the prophets, a beacon in the night,
90. Guiding us towards, the dawn's early light.
91. Where the lion and lamb, together can play,

92. In the midst of where our children lay,
93. This is the challenge, set before us now,
94. To change the course of history, to fulfill our vow.
95. For the sake of the future, for the love of the land,
96. Let us walk together, hand in hand.
97. As the clouds of division, fill the sky and air,
98. And bring fire amongst the water, despair,
99. Let us rise as one, in the face of the fray,
100. United in purpose, without delay.
101. For the prophecies foretell, not just of woe and dismay,
102. But of a chance for redemption, a brighter day.
103. Where justice rolls down like waters, a never-ending stream,
104. And righteousness like a mighty wave, a living dream.
105. Let us then, with courage, face the impending storms,
106. Transforming our world, in all its forms.
107. For in unity lies strength, a power so vast,
108. A bond unbreakable, forever to last.
109. In this moment of decision, let our voices be heard,
110. Echoing the ancient prophecies, word for word.
111. For we are the bearers of the light, the keepers of the flame,
112. Called to mend the world, in the Divine's name.
113. So let us march forth, with hope in our heart,
114. Each doing our part, to impart.
115. A legacy of peace, for generations to come,
116. Where the song of unity, is sung by everyone.
117. As the prophets once declared, so now do we,
118. A vision of a united world, where all are free.
119. To live in harmony, in love and respect,
120. A testament to what we can achieve, when we connect.

Psalm 265

A Psalm of MaBeYo:

1. In the time of nearing end, the voice did cleave,
2. Proclaimed the ancient word, for those who believe.
3. Hearken ye nations, both far and near,
4. The hour of reckoning doth appear.
5. A cauldron set upon the coals to broil,
6. A symbol of a land, steeped in turmoil.
7. Within it lay the finest of the flock,
8. Yet underneath, the fire begins to mock.
9. The rust within, not cleansed away,
10. Portends the doom that shall not delay.
11. For in its depth, corruption lies,
12. A bitter truth, no one denies.
13. The city known for splendor and for might,
14. Now a furnace of affliction, day and night.
15. Her sins, like scorching fire, consume,
16. And in its heat, no righteousness can bloom.
17. Woe to the city, woe to the land,
18. That ignores the stretch of an outstretched hand.
19. The blood she shed, within her midst,
20. Cries out from ground, a haunting list.
21. No more shall her filthiness be purged,
22. Until My fury's fully surged.
23. The dross shall melt, the silver refine,
24. But woe to those who ignore the sign.
25. "Therefore, O people, hear my plea,
26. Return, repent, come back to me."
27. For in your midst, the fire rages,
28. Written down in these sacred pages.
29. The cauldron bubbles, the metal screams,

30. Reflect, oh nation, on your dreams.
31. Was it for this, the prophets cried,
32. That in your pride, you would abide?
33. The heat intensifies, the moment nears,
34. A culmination of all your fears.
35. But know this truth, deep down inside,
36. In repentance and humility, you must abide.
37. The righteous shall live, by faith they'll stand,
38. Upheld by a merciful, almighty hand.
39. But the wicked shall find their plans in ruin,
40. In the land where eagles are soon to swoon.
41. So let the cauldron boil and bubble,
42. But let it not cause you more trouble.
43. For out of the fire, out of the strife,
44. Comes a call to lead a righteous life.
45. Remember, O nation, your high estate,
46. And turn from paths that aggravate.
47. The hour is late, the shadows grow,
48. But light still shines, to guide you so.
49. Heed the signs, the warnings clear,
50. And walk in ways that draw you near.
51. For in the end, the righteous will see,
52. A new dawn of peace, and liberty.
